Proudly independent

Proudly independent and effortlessly eclectic –

Clerkenwell has always thrived on doing things quietly in its own way. While history oozes from every street corner, the area is constantly evolving. A creative destination for those in the know, today's Clerkenwell is built on the individuals and businesses who are drawn here. Join them in the heart of it and discover why.

Colonna & Small's

🚶 2 mins

Over the last few years, Leather Lane has become a hub of concept coffee shops. An award winning barista, Maxwell Colonna-Dashwood and his wife Lesley discovered the Third Wave Coffee movement while in Australia back in 2008. Their London outpost and roastery is now a temple to the science of the holy bean.

The Salad Kitchen

🚶 3 min

When Sam Cole and Ross Cannon looked around at London's vibrant food scene back in 2014, there was one thing missing: a good, and we mean really good, salad shop. It's the kind of healthy spot you would find in LA.

66 Leather Lane,
London, EC1N 7TX

Terroni of Clerkenwell

🚶 1 min

Back in 1878, Luigi Terroni opened the first Italian deli in London. It's now a local institution. Shelves stocked high with pasta, sauces from the homeland, and those little Sicilian Cannoli pastries you can never resist.

London EC1R 5DL

Luardos

🚶 3 min

From a pink Citroen HY van adorned with day of the dead masks, Luardos brings us a hot splash of Mexico City. Watch the scotch bonnet peppers charcoaling ready for their famously hot sauce. Burrito street food heaven.
